Hey folks,

The year looks like it's off to a good start. We appreciate your business and interest in our product line. You'll notice a few new items throughout the catalog, give them a try if they fit in your mix. Our Alocasia 'Regal Shields' from Arodia Research has turned out to be wonderful introduction, topping that genus with its' sales. Some new perennial grasses, pitcher plants, and begonias will keep you thinking about expanding your selection. Give us a call, we'll be glad to talk over all our new plant introductions. You can also find us at Cultivate 2015, PPA's annual convention, The Landscape Show, and a few Rolling Stones concerts throughout the summer. See you there!

You'll notice another type of new introduction in the catalog. Lyric Michael, our first grandchild is now walking through the nursery and staying busy with lots of new things. Belynda and I are not sure if he is heading into the business, but we'll push him that way. Our industry has been challenging throughout its' history and will continue to be, but we wouldn't change that for any reason.

Have a great year,

Sincerely,
Mike

BREEDERS

AG3 works close with breeders and breeder representatives to bring the latest and greatest varieties to our customers.

Bobby & Richard Saul, ItSaul Plants

The Saul brothers first launched Saul Nurseries, Inc. over 20 years ago in Atlanta, Georgia to supply the local landscape market. Robert (Bobby) Saul earned degrees in horticulture and agronomy from the University of Georgia and ran a landscaping business before entering the nursery business. Richard Saul has a degree in business from North Georgia College. His constant interest in plant breeding and his keen eye for unusual sports on plants have led to the introduction of several new varieties through ItSaul Plants.

Brian Williams

For years Brian Williams would dig his collection of elephant ears every fall and replant in spring. The severe winters and frozen soil of his Louisville, Kentucky garden meant certain death to a tropical tuber, so he was surprised to find a few that would survive and sprout in spring. He began breeding with those, selecting for more vivid colors and a variety of sizes, all of which can survive a zone 6 winter. Then he selected well-behaved plants that did not produce runners. Now he shares his garden hardy selections (Alocasia, Colocasia and Canna) through tissue culture liners.

Leeann Connelly Shearouse

Leeann Connelly Shearouse opened Tropical Pond & Garden 25 years ago. The Florida based nursery soon began shipping aquatic and unusual plants hybridized by Leeann all over the world. In 1996, she became the contributing editor for Pond and Garden magazine. In 1998, she was awarded the Banksian Medal from the Royal Horticultural Society in London, England. In 2002, Leeann opened the Loxahatchee wildlife rescue center and hospital. The purpose of the center is to rehabilitate and return to the wild injured and orphaned wildlife. The royalties that Leeann received from her hybrids sold in this catalog go to support this center.

Nico Rijnbeek

Marco van Noort

Marco van Noort is one of a third generation of growers that operates a nursery with his wife, Heidy. Most of the plants they propagate are rooted cuttings and are sold to perennial nurseries all over Europe. Since visiting breeder "Ernst Pagels" in north Germany, Marco was infected by the breeder virus. He was taught the little details on how to produce the best, the most beautiful, the strongest and the most healthy plants. He still uses the same techniques 'Ernst Pagels' used in breeding his plants - "Simple" Bees. Marco has been working with 'Simple' bees since he was 14, it is a break in his day and his hobby to work with them. Marco believes that breeding with bees is the traditional way of breeding and although not the fastest it is the best method to create the next 'great' plant beauty. Marco works with Nico Rijnbeek of Rijnbeek & Zoon, BV in the Netherlands to get his product into the US market through a collaboration with AG3, Inc.

David Crump

David Crump, owner and operator of Carolina Gardens has been breeding Sarracenia, Drosera, Dionea and other carnivorous plants for over 25 years. David has released 'Carolina Yellow Jacket', 'Fat Chance' and 'Bug Bat' to the industry through AG 3. His wish is to see these and other carnivorous varieties thrive and be strong in the industry for years to come.

LariAnn Garner

LariAnn Garner has had an enduring interest in tropical plants since her teenage years. Two of the first plants she grew were aroids, so it is no surprise that, when her interest and focus turned to plant breeding, LariAnn chose aroids as the plant family to work with. She has been hybridizing using species in the genera Philodendron and Alocasia since the late 1970s, and since then has expanded her work to include the genera Anthurium, Caladium and Typhonium. Her skills are augmented by her degrees of Bachelor of Science in Botany and Master of Agriculture in Plant Physiology from the University of Florida. LariAnn's primary goal has been to develop tropical hybrids that are cold resistant enough for gardens in zones 10 through 8. Even more importantly, her objective is to produce aroid hybrids that are as exotic as the rarest and most difficult to grow species, yet that can be grown by any gardener with basic skills.
